The Chair acknowledgment

Dear Chair, I am pleased to have been invited to give the opening address at the 2019 Annual Meeting of the European Association of Business Ethics (EABE) in Amsterdam. It is an honor to be invited to speak at this important event and to have the opportunity to share my thoughts on business ethics with you.

Business ethics and security

Business ethics and security are two concepts that are often discussed in isolation, but they are in fact closely intertwined. In this paper, I explore the relationship between these two concepts and argue that a strong ethical foundation is essential for a company's long-term security.

Business ethics is the study of moral principles and values that govern the behavior of individuals and organizations in the workplace. It is a discipline that has become increasingly important in recent years, as companies have faced a growing number of ethical challenges. Security, on the other hand, is the state of being protected from harm or damage. It is a concept that is often associated with physical security, but it can also refer to the security of a company's data and information.
